CHILD-MOTHER'S STORY WINS JURY'S VERDICT

Frank McCartney, of Clarence, Guilty of Statutory Rape.

PENITENTIARY OFFENSE

Pathetic Scene in Court When Catherine Watson, on Witness Stand, Told of her Betrayal When Hardly 13 Years old—Plea for Mercy.

Convicted of statutory rape, Frank McCartney, a young man residing near Clarence, faces a maximum sentence of $1000 fine and fifteen years at hard labor in the penitentiary.

A jury in court yesterday convicted McCartney on the testimony of 15-years-old Catherine Watson, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harris Watson, also residing near Clarence. At the time the crime was committed, the little girl was not yet fourteen years of age. McCartney is now about 21 years old. The case was bitterly contested in the courts. McCartney put up a determined defense, attempting to place the responsibility on a married man residing at Clarence. The jury decided to accept the testimony of the young girl and early yesterday morning brought a verdict declaring McCartney, guilty and asking for him the mercy of the court.

Never in the history of the Centre County courts has there been a parallel case, one in which a girl of such tender years had been betrayed and repudiated and forced to publicly acknowledge her shame. The case was the chief topic of discussion when court convened in the remodeled Court House to take up a long criminal and civil list.

As she appeared on the witness stand, Catherine Watson was an object of pity and the sympathy of all went out to her as she related her story in her child-like manner. Now and then, but at such times only, did she appear to realize the enormity of her misfortune. She was such a little bit of a thing, in dresses hardly below her knees, and as she sat in the witness box, with a seven months' old infant in her arms, one could not fully realize that she was a mother. It was more the picture of a little school girl playing with a doll.

It was a scene so strange, so unlike the usual grist of a criminal court, that hardened lawyers were touched by it all and Judge Orvis, with consideration for the little girl's feelings, made no attempt to press her for details or for her to lift her voice when it, at times, would sink to a whisper. In a low voice she told the jury that McCartney was responsible for her misfortune, that she was hardly more than 13 years old when she was tempted into evil ways and that she did not realize that she was doing wrong until it was too late. Then, immersed in trouble, she turned to the one whose wishes she had innocently obeyed, only to find herself rejected and repudiated and forced to tell her mother of her shame.

The jury believed this little child-mother's story. Everybody in the court room believed it. The announcement of the verdict created no surprise. Even before the verdict was rendered spectators indulged in speculation as to how severe would be McCartney's sentence when he is called before Judge Orvis.

Court convened on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. After hearing a few petitions the grand jury was called and sworn and Howard E. Holzworth, salesman, of Unionville elected as foreman. The court explained the different crimes that would probably come before them, and how to arrive at true bills and bills ignored. The Constables of the several districts of the County, then made their quarterly returns and court adjourned to attend the funeral of Mrs. D. F. Fortney.

Court again convened at 2 o'clock and the following cases came up for adjudication:

Commonwealth vs. Samuel Burfield, indicted for betrayal, prosecutrix Rose Fye. This case is from Burnside Township, the defendant plead guilty and the usual sentence was imposed.

Commonwealth vs. William Moran, prosecutor George Valentine; Harry Markle; Charles Hartsock; Harry Dukeman; J. W. Blair; Christ Beezer, being six cases against the defendant for larceny of horse blankets. The cases are from Bellefonte, and the facts were fully published in this paper at the time of the arrest. Defendant waived the finding of the grand jury, and plead guilty to all of the charges.

NARROWLY ESCAPED FREEZING

Dr. Fisher, of Zion, Rendered Unconscious by Fall on Ice.

Dr. P. S. Fisher narrowly escaped freezing to death on Friday night, last, the result of a fall on the ice near his home, at Zion. Unknown to members of his family, who were inside the house, a short distance away, Dr. Fisher lay unconscious on the ice for over two hours. His face was terribly bruised by the fall and his heavy beard was frosen in blood to the ice.

It was shortly after midnight when Dr. Fisher arrived home from Bellefonte. He had been driving all evening and was completely chilled, the thermometer being several degrees below zero. He took the harness off the horse and laid it on the sleigh. After blanketing his horse he started for the house. From that time until he came to his senses in bed, about 9 o'clock in the morning, Dr. Fisher is unable to recall anything that happened.

John Ebey, who lives next door, started out to hitch up a team to take some young folks home about 5 o'clock in the morning, when he saw a man fumbling at the latch to Dr. Fisher's corn crib. Suspecting that it was a thief. Mr. Ebey quietly approached the man and flashed a lantern in his face. To his amazement he discovered Dr. Fisher, his face covered with blood, stumbling about in a confused manner. Dr. Fisher was assisted into his home and his injuries dressed. It was not until after 9 o'clock that his mind cleared up and he was able to talk with members of his family.

It seems that when he fell his left temple struck a hard lump of ice, cutting a bad gash and rendering him unconscious. His face will show the effects of the accident for many weeks to come.

Baseball Meeting Tomorrow Night.

Before the snow and ice are entirely off the ground, Bellefonte is beginning to brush up and get ready for the baseball season of 1910. A meeting will be held tomorrow (Friday) evening, in the office of John J. Bower, to discuss the situation in general and figure out what the prospects are for a winning team this year. On Tuesday evening, March 15, a baseball benefit will be given at the Scenic. A number of popular young girls will engage in a ticket-selling contest for the event. The young woman selling the greatest number of tickets will be awarded a handsome seal leather traveling bag. The tickets are 10 cents, each. The result of the contest will be announced at the Scenic on the evening of the benefit.

Landlord Reish Cleared.

The Grand Jury this week ignored the charge against James Reish, the popular proprietor of the Potters Mills hotel, of selling liquor to persons of intemperate habits. Landlord Reish has the reputation of being a careful hotelkeeper and we congratulate him on the action of the Grand Jury. Judged by the comment about the Court House, spite work had considerable to do with the action brought against him and which, therefore, justly failed.

New Firm in Business.

John McSuley and Charles Anderson, two well known Bellefonte young men, will next week embark in business for themselves. They have rented the basement of the Petrikin Hall and will open a completely equipped wall paper store. They will then be in the market for your orders for wall papering, painting, etc. John Mcsuley is a first-class painter. For some time past he has been working for E. J. Eckenroth.

Penn Creek A Trout Stream.

State Fish Commissioner William E. Meehan and the Board of Fisheries have rendered their decision in regard to the status of Penn Creek. They hold that it is a trout stream to and including the breast of Grove's and Half-penny dam. There was considerable dispute as to fishing rights in this stream and the matter finally submitted to the State Board of Fisheries, with the result as noted.

Your Address.

On the basis of replies received to 150 letters sent to representative men and women of Bellefonte, Rev. Dr. J. Allison Platts is preparing a series of addresses to young people. He will preach the first one on Sunday evening, next. Several letters will be read. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Witmer Inn Sold.

The Witmer Inn, at Clearfield, has been sold by Clark Richardson to Harry Garwood, of Greensburg, who assumed charge this week. Mr. Richardson will return to Philipsburg, at which place he resided before going to Clearfield.

PROFESSOR D. M. WOLF DIES AT SPRING MILLS

Noted Educator and Minister Succumbs to Pneumonia.

ILL BUT ONE WEEK

Brief Sketch of One Who Lived a Useful and Eventful Life—Was Widely Known and Highly Esteemed—Funeral Services Today.

To every friend—and his friends were legion—the news of the death of Rev. Daniel M. Wolf, at Spring Mills, on Monday evening, last, was a message causing genuine sorrow. In hundreds of hearts in Centre County, in the State at large and in many places outside the State, the announcement that Professor Wolf had passed away caused a tinge of sadness.

Pneumonia was the disease that ended a beautiful life and an eventful career. He had been ill but one short week. On Sunday, February 20, Professor Wolf became ill. Owing to advanced age he was unable to muster the strength to withstand the strain and the heart finally failed to respond. He died shortly after 4 o'clock on Monday morning at the residence of J. Wells Evans, where he had made his home for almost 50 years.

The funeral services will be held today (Thursday.) There will be a short service at the Evans home at 9:30 o'clock, after which more general services will be held at the Salem Reformed church, below Penn Hall.

Genial and kindly, a lovable, honorable, Christian man, the memory of Professor Wolf will live with the countless numbers who as boys or girls were under his guidance, in the church or in the schoolroom. A minister of marked ability and a teacher who was exceptionally successful, Professor Wolf was widely known and by all highly respected. He was a man who loved his work. He was wedded to his task of helping others. He never married. All of the love and affection of his big heart were centered in his church and schoolroom. Of his family, but one brother survives, Dr. Simpson Wolf, who is a resident of Tennessee.

Born near Hublersburg, June 15, 1837, Professor Wolf was not quite 73 years of age. He attended what was then and is still today known as "Wolf's school." He was prepared for college at the Aaronsburg Academy, at that time under the direction of J. Ilgen Burrell, who was the second County Superintendent of Centre County.

It was while attending the Aaronsburg Academy that he become acquainted with J. Wells and L. Krider Evans, of Spring Mills. They took him to their home. The friendship thus formed became the more firmly cemented with each passing year. To him the Evans home was his home, and it was there that he lived the greater part of his life. L. Krider Evans is now a successful minister at Pottstown.

The stern school of necessity prompted Professor Wolf to teach school in order to make a living and obtain means for continuing his education. It was as an educator that he was best known and to himself alone he owed the many laurels won. When he entered Franklin and Marshall college, at Lancaster, it was as a sophomore. When, in 1863, he graduated, it was with first honors of his class—the Marshall oration. For a time he taught at the Boalsburg Academy, later entering the Theological Seminary, at Mercersburg. He was principal of the Oley Academy, in Berks county, in 1865 and 1866, one of his pupils there being Dr. P. S. Fisher, of Zion. From there he went to Gregg township, Centre county, where he had charge of the Penn Hall Academy.

It was in 1868 that Professor Wolf was chosen adjunct professor of languages at Franklin and Marshall college, serving in that capacity for two years. He became pastor of the Bellefonte Lutheran church, but resigned, in 1872, to return to Franklin and Marshall as professor of ancient languages. This position he finally resigned owing to ill health, and he resumed teaching at Penn Hall and Spring Mills. In 1881, he was chosen County Superintendent, filling the position with much credit to himself and the schools. For a time he was an instructor at the Bellefonte High school. His last work as an educator was at the Spring Mills Academy, which he relinquished about seven years ago.

To Professor Wolf was given the rare talent of being able to impart knowledge to others. He was a genius in handling his pupils and commanding their affection and highest esteem. As we write an

MAN NEARLY PERISHED HORSE DROWNED IN LAKE

S. S. Osman, of Port Matilda, Has Thrilling Experience Near Zion.

WAS RESCUED ON RAFT

Horse And Buggy Still in Lake—Neighbors Heard Man's Cries in Intense Darkness And Went to His Aid—Got Off The Road.

Samuel S. Osman, the well known undertaker of Port Matilda, last night accidentally drove into the lake near Perry Gentzel's, near Zion, and when rescued two hours later, he was almost perished from cold and exposure.

The horse which he was driving, was drowned.

Osman was rescued by Benjamin Kauffman and other neighbors, who built a raft and in this manner got him to a place of safety.

Osman's horse had fallen down and could not be rescued. It is supposed that the horse had become entangled in a barb wire fence. The horse had been hired from Christ Beezer, the liveryman at Bellefonte.

When Osman was taken from his perilous position, in the lake, about 10 o'clock, he was almost frozen to death. Strong stimulants were applied and he was placed alongside a hot stove in the Kauffman home. It was some time, however, before he had recovered sufficiently to tell much about the incident.

The lake in question is near the Gentzel and Kauffman homes, on the road between Pleasant Gap and Zion. The water at present is over seven feet deep in many places. The lake has been appearing about once in every five years for probably the last twenty-five years or more. Recently, it has been appearing at more frequent intervals.

When at a high point, the lake crosses the road and a stranger, not knowing of the danger ahead, would easily get off the road and into the deeper water in the fields on either side. This is what happened last night to Osman, who was driving to Zion to make a social call.

HATCHERY TROUT

Noted Pathologist Declares They do not Have Cancer.

The Bellefonte fish hatchery was the scene of an inspection on Saturday, last, by Dr. David Marine, the noted pathologist, who before his departure made the significant announcement that trout supposedly afflicted with cancer do not in reality have cancer and that they may be eaten with no danger of the disease infecting a human being.

This decision by Dr. Marine, which he says is based on a most thorough investigation, is the extreme opposite of the commonly accepted theory on the subject.

In the party were Commissioner Meehan, Dr. Marine and the following superintendents of hatcheries: A. G. Buller, Union City; Philip H. Hartman, Erie; W. H. Safford, Conneaut Lake; William T. Haas, Spruce Creek; Jerry R. Barthous, Philadelphia, and N. R. Buller, Wayne. Others in the party were Captain Jerry R. Driscall, Commander of the State Fish Department boat, "Commodore Perry," at Erie; Andrew R. Whitaker, a member of the Board of Fish Commissioners and a member of the Philadelphia bar; Howard A Chase, president of the United Sportsmen, of Philadelphia, and Charles Wetherill, Secretary of the Pohoqualine Association, of Philadelphia.

While in Bellefonte betweens trains, after their visit to the fish hatchery, Commissioner Meehan and Mr. Chase called at "The Republican" office. Explaining the investigation that has been under way and the significance of Dr. Marine's report, Commissioner Meehan made the following statement:

"Dr. Marine's investigation has been most thorough. He started at the very bottom and worked it through to the top. He has given apparently indisputable evidence that the disease is not cancer but simply a goitre of a tumorous character. Dr. Marine asserts that there is not the slightest danger to the human being if fish so affected are eaten, although he admits while the present growth is not cancer it might if neglected develop a form of cancer. Dr. Marine, in support of his conclusions, offers the following proofs:

"1. If fish, afflicted with goitre even in advanced stages, are taken from the ponds and liberated in streams, they spontaneously recover.

"2—If the same fish are restored to the ponds, they will again contract the disease.

"3—Cancer is progressive. It is never in rising or falling waves.

"Dr. Gaylord, in a report that fish so afflicted had cancer, caused a scare over the country. Dr. Marine, while extremely conservative, has advised me most emphatically that there is no need to notify owners or proprietors of commercial establishments not to ship fish infested with goitre to the markets.

"Goitre is usually found in all fish hatcheries. At the Spruce Creek hatchery, where it was in its worst form, the disease is yielding or giving way. There is scarcely any at all at the Bellefonte hatchery."

PRETTY HOME WEDDING

Miss Blanche Tressler Weds J. A. Creamer at Rock Springs.

One of the prettiest home weddings in many years was that on Thursday, last, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Tressler, of Rock Springs, when their daughter, Blanche, was married to J. A. Creamer, of State College. The event was one of interest socially and to the large number of friends of the popular young couple.

The wedding ceremony was performed at high noon. The wedding march was played by Wilfred N. Keller, of Linden Hall. After an informal reception an elaborate wedding breakfast was served.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Creamer, A. O. Tyson and daughter, Lizzie, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Corl, Mr. and Mrs. David Tressler, Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Corl, Mr. and Mrs. I. O. MRS. W. T. LEATHERS DIES

Passes Away at Home at Howard After Severe Illness.

The life of a good, Christian woman was brought to a close when death last night ended the suffering of Mrs. W. T. Leathers, Sr., at her late home at Howard. She had been ill for some time and for several days her condition was such that no hope was entertained for her recovery.

Mrs. Leathers was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church and was known and admired by a wide circle of friends. She formerly resided at Kennedy, but about twelve or fourteen years ago she removed to Howard. Her husband preceded her to the grave seven or eight years ago. She is survived by the following children: James, Fred, George, Cookman, Jesse, Mrs. Howard Neff, of Curtin; Lucy, residing at home, and Mrs. Charles Yearick, who lives at Jacksonville.

A Word to You.

We invite the attention of readers of "The Republican" to the large advertisement of Montgomery & Co. on the last page of this paper. This progressive firm have contracted with us for 1,500 inches of space to advertise their large and constantly growing business. For clothing and gentlemen's furnishings the Montgomery & Co. store ranks with those of the larger cities and affords the people of Bellefonte and Centre County an opportunity to secure the very latest in patterns and the very best in quality. A fact of which we are justly proud is that invariably our subscribers direct that "The Republican" be sent, not to their places of business, but to their homes. A newspaper that is wanted in the home has value far beyond that of those newspapers that are glanced at and then thrown away. Each week finds "The Republican" making new friends and entering new homes. For after all, it is into the home that the message of the advertiser must go if it is to reach the place where needs are determined and decision arrived at as to the best place to make one's purchases. The rapidly growing popularity of "The Republican" is thus further attested in the large amount of advertising space contracted for each week by a firm of the type of Montgomery & Co. No firm in this community is more closely in touch with Centre County homes and we are quite frank in saying that it is our aim not only to present an interesting newspaper, but to devote our advertising columns to business houses which are established in the confidence of the people and are jealous of their reputation for honest dealing.

ZERBY IS WAITING FOR KEICHLINE TO COOL OFF

Democratic Chairman Undecided About Seeking Re-election.

SILENT ON THAT $400

Gives no Information Regarding Fund which Keichline says was Raised for Democratic Ticket and then Used to Defeat Him.

Democratic County Chairman Zerby is undecided whether or not to run counter to the wrath of Squire Keichline by seeking re-election. Mr. Zerby may again make a dash for the chairmanship. Then again, he may not. It all depends.

Laughing at the anger of Squire Keichline, Mr. Zerby said that he had concluded not to stand for re-election as County Chairman, but that if it would please Squire Keichline not to have him run, he probably would take keen pleasure in becoming a candidate. Last week, in an interview in "The Republican," Keichline, still aroused over the manner in which he had been knifed at the polls by Zerby and other Democracs, defied Mr. Zerby to seek re-election. In short, Keichline said that he would take the field against him if Zerby should dare to stand for re-election.

"Are you going to accept Squire Keichline's challenge to you to stand for re-election as County Chairman?" Mr. Zerby was asked by a representative of "The Republican."

"Well, now," he replied, "I had about concluded not to seek re-election, but if it will suit John I'll be a candidate."

"How about the $400 which Squire Keichline says you raised for the Democratic ticket and then used to bring about his defeat?" Chairman Zerby was asked.

"My, my," he replied, "I wish I had it."

"Squire Keichline says you did have it."

"That's a lot of money," was Chairman Zerby's reply and also his sum total of information regarding the campaign fund which Squire Keichline charges was used to aid in accomplishing his defeat.

Squire Keichline's interview in "The Republican," in which he breathed war on Zerby and others, gave the Democrats more to talk about than they have had for many a day.

"Keichline is mad, but he'll get over it," remarked one Democrat whose name is on the Keichline blacklist."

"Don't you think he'll get over it," spoke up another Democrat who has crossed words with the Squire on several occasions.

A third Democrat, who is rather large in girth and who never walks rapidly, and who incidentally had a hand in the knifing of Keichline, concluded that it was about time for him to go home to his supper.

Meanwhile, many Democrats, and especially Squire Keichline, are waiting for some more definite announcement by Chairman Zerby as to whether he has the nerve to stand for re-election.

BALD EAGLE FARMS.

Observer Tells Results of Use of Lime To Improve Land.

An interesting narrative of a trip through the Bald Eagle valley has been put out in pamphlet form by the American Lime & Stone Company, which has large operations in Centre and adjoining counties. The subject is the "Transformation of the Bald Eagle Valley" and "The Reason Why", as discovered by an observer. The article follows:

The Bald Eagle Valley extends from the Juniata River at Tyrone, Blair County, North to West Branch of the Susquehanna River at Lock Haven, Clinton County, Pa., a distance of 54 miles.

It is traversed by the Bald Eagle Valley Railroad (P. R R.) for its entire length. The grade and curvature of this line is probably the lightest of any railroad of equal length in the State.

The Bald Eagle Creek flows southward from the Summit at Dix Station to the Juniata River at Tyrone, and northward to the West Branch at Lock Haven, Pa.

A public highway, paralleled with the railroad, traverses the Valley and, in dry season from Milesburg to Tyrone it is one of the best clay roads in the State of Pennsylvania, especially desirable for automobiling. The Valley practically divides at Milesburg.

A great change in the agricultural conditions is taking place in the Valley, especially that part lying between Milesburg and Tyrone.

In former times it was dotted with charcoal iron furnaces, and the towns and villages take their names from the old furnaces, which were usually named for the favorite daughters of the furnace owners.

The soil of the Valley is of various kinds, all naturally deficient in lime and not very productive even when newly cleared. When first cleared the first few crops were good and some clover would grow, but the clover gradually disappeared and other crops were poor. This seems to indicate that clover had exhausted what little lime the soil contained, as an application of lime fits it to grow clover again.

The soil over the ridges along the Valley is principally grey or black shale, and on some of the outlying ridges it is red shale. The bottoms are sand and gravel loam, and clay and clay loam, very spouty and wet, and it is necessary to drain thoroughly before the best crops can be grown. It is not hard to imagine what this land would be like after a number of years of cropping without using lime, and some of it done very indifferently. Some of the farms got so poor that it was almost useless to put in a crop.

A few years ago some of the more enterprising farmers, realizing that something must be done, began draining and liming and the results have been surprising. Some of the farmers report extremely large increase in crops and a luxuriant growth of clover. A traveler, glancing from the car window in passing, can pick out the farms where liming is practiced.

The writer was in the Valley recently and talked with a number of the progressive and successful farmers. They were all very enthusiastic over the results they were getting from the use of lime.

At Bald Eagle the Sharer Bros. own a large farm. When they bought it 7 years ago it was very poor and run down; no grass at all and clover was only wasted when sown. Mr. Edward Sharer said that they got results immediately after they began liming, and that liming changed their crops from practically nothing to good crops. It is no trouble to grow good clover now, and they cut 2 to 3 tons of hay per acre, grow 90 to 100 bushels ear corn, 40 to 60 bushels of oats, and 25 to 30 bushels of rye per acre. They use about 50 bushels of lime per acre, applied with a manure spreader.

The second farm from this belongs to Mr. Richard Beaston, of Tyrone. His soil is slaty upland and boggy; clay bottom. Mr. Beaston said: "About 3 years ago I limed this land, using about 50 bushels lump lime per acre, and this with the use of barnyard manure has brought the land up to a good state of productiveness. Clover grows luxuriantly." Mr. Beaston believes strongly in the use of lime and barnyard manure, both to obtain and maintain fertility, and uses but little commercial fertilizer.

Thomas Balling's farm is next along the Valley. Soil is loam and grey shale. This farm was verv poor when he bought it some years ago. He drained it and began liming, and now it grows the best crops. This fall he has a fine field of clover on a slaty hillside, which was naturally very poor. His land now produces 40 to 55 bushels oats and 70 to 90 bushels ears of corn per acre while unlimed land in the neighborhood produces 10 to 15 bushels oats and 20 to 30 bushels ear corn per acre. He called attention to an unlimed field of 12 acres that this season produced 90 bushels oats—less than 8 bushels per acre, while his limed field produced 50 bushels per acre. He began by using 100 bushels lime per acre, but is now using 50 bushels renewed every 5 to 7 years. He has great faith in lime and barnyard manure and considerable of his success is due to good drainage.

Some distance back of Bald Eagle Mr. Thomas Miller has a hilly farm, mostly grey slate; he cleared the greater part of it himself. The first few seasons clover and other crops were good, but clover gradually died out and sorrel and briers began to get troublesome. He had plenty of manure and used it, but got no improvement until he began using lime. Now crops are improving, clover grows fine and the sorrel and briers are disappearing. Adjoining Mr. Miller's is a slaty farm which Mr. Stewart Weston bought several years ago. He showed me a fine field of clover that grew nothing but briers before he began liming. He says he would not think of trying to farm without lime now.

Port Matilda was visited next. Messrs. Chaney and Thompson have large farms here in care of H. C. Woodring; soil is principally shale. Mr. Wooring said that before they began to lime crops were very poor; no clover, and little grass of any kind. Now they have fine fields of clover, and crops have increased 50 to 75 per cent. They use lime and barnyard manure.

W. J. Wiser has a farm just out of town; soil is clay loam and slate. He has been liming with very good results. He uses both lump and hydrate and thinks the hydrate will probably prove good for his needs. He drilled hydrate with oats last spring, sowed clover and has a fine stand this fall. He had a marshy field that was no good for anything; he drained and limed it and it is now growing good crops. He noted several farms in the neighborhood that had been extremely poor and run down. They began liming several years ago and now these farmers are growing prosperous.

A little off the Valley proper are a number of farms showing fine results from the use of lime. Aaron Woodring said he could grow no clover at all, but since he began to lime clover grows fine and other crops have increased upwards of 50 per cent. Results of the lime showed particularly well on the upland shaly soil. He uses both lump lime and hydrate.

John Kelly has a red shale farm near Mr. Woodring's. He has been using lime for several years and is very enthusiastic over the results he is getting on the red shale. He is growing fine crops of hay and other crops where, before liming, grass was scarce and other crops poor. He uses both lump and hydrate.

The next stop was Martha. Here can be seen some of the very best results from the use of lime. Budd Thompson has large farms here; grey shale upland and gravel loam bottoms. He said that before liming his land was very poor and and run down; sowed clover seed year after year and it was simply wasted, as clover would not grow. He began liming several years ago and now has no trouble growing clover and other crops abundantly. He uses about 40 bushels lime per acre, and depends entirely upon lime and barnyard manure. His land is accumulating lime and he is now thinking of trying Alfalfa, which judging from the way clover grows, should be a success.

The next farm belongs to Sheriff Chronister. This farm, like most others in the Valley, was very much run down. He put in a complete system of tile drains and began using lime several years ago. Now clover grows anywhere on the farm and all crops are greatly improved. He uses lime, manure and some commercial fertilizer, but he says the greater part of his success is due to good drainage and lime. This fall he had a new field of clover that was a sight to see; and it was almost knee deep and very thick and thrifty.

At Julian, W. S. Miller has a farm; soil is mostly sand and gravel loam. He limed a field about 15 years ago and the effect of the lime can be seen in the crops today. He called attention to a field of seven acres, the grass on which amounted to almost nothing before liming; he limed it and the first crop of grass cut 10 tons of hay. He said clover grows wherever lime is applied, but no clover without lime.

At Unionville D. E. Fisher owns large farms and apple orchards. He has been using lime for a number of years, both lump and hydrate. They have fine clover fields, and he says that lime benefits clover and corn most but all crops have been benefitted. He uses hydrate principally on the wheat crop, which insures a good stand of clover. He says he would not like to try farming without lime now.

On the other side of Unionville Mr. Underwood has a large farm on which lime has been used for a number of years with results the same as others mentioned.

And the encouraging feature in the Bald Eagle Valley is the disappearing of unsightly fences and brushy fence rows. Cattle are kept in the barnyards, or pastured on the uncultivated hillsides, and the expense of maintaining fences avoided.

To any one interested in farming, a trip through this Valley would give them a fair idea of the value of lime in making up run down soil, and would be well worth the time and money spent.

It is quite probable that with the proper use of lime, drainage and good cultivation, this whole Valley can be made to produce equal to the most productive sections of the State. Look out for the Bald Eagle Valley.

THE BABY TURTLE.

He Has to Paddle His Own Canoe From the Moment of Birth.

Just so soon as a baby turtle emerges from the egg off he scuttles down to the sea. He has no one to teach him, no one to guide him. In his curious little brain there is implanted a streak of caution based upon the fact that until a certain period in his life his armor is soft and no defense against hungry fish, and he at once seeks shelter in the tropical profusion of the gulf weed, which holds within its branching fronds an astonishing abundance of marine life. Here the young turtle feeds unmolested while his armor undergoes the hardening process.

Whatever the young sea turtle eats and wherever he eats it, facts not generally ascertained, one thing is certain —it agrees with him immensely. He leads a pleasant sort of life, basking in the tropical sun and cruising leisurely in the cool depths.

Once he has attained the weight of twenty-five pounds, which usually occurs within the first year, the turtle is free from all danger. After that no fish or mammal, however ravenous, however well armed with teeth, interferes with the turtle.

When once he has withdrawn his head from its position of outlook into the folds of his neck between the two shells intending devourers may struggle in vain to make an impression upon him.—Harper's Weekly.

LINCOLN'S LESSON.

The Way He Learned to Tell When a Thing Is Proved.

Abraham Lincoln was once asked how he acquired his wonderful logical powers and his acuteness in analysis.

Lincoln replied: "It was my terrible discouragement which did that for me. When I was a young man I went into an office to study law. I saw that a lawyer's business is largely to prove things. I said to myself, 'Lincoln, when is a thing proved?' That was a poser. What constitutes proof? Not evidence; that was not the point. There may be evidence enough, but wherein consists the proof? I groaned over the question and finally said to myself, 'Ah, Lincoln, you can't tell.' Then I thought what use is it for me to be in a law office if I can't tell when a thing is proved?

"So I gave it up and went back home. Soon after I returned to the old log cabin I fell in with a copy of Euclid. I had not the slightest notion of what Euclid was, and I thought I would find out. I therefore began at the beginning, and before spring I had gone through the old Euclid's geometry and could demonstrate every proposition in the book. Then in the spring, when I had got through with it, I said to myself one day, 'Ah, do you know when a thing is proved?' and I answered, 'Yes, sir; I do. Then you may go back to the law shop,' and I went."

Tombs of Abelard and Heloise.

Of the hundreds of thousands who make a pilgrimage to Pere Lachaise on All Saints' day few doubt the authenticity of the most famous tombs. One in particular is never questioned —that of Heloise and Abelard, the story of whose unhappy love is so grandly told by Pope. This monument is the work of Alexander Lenoin, the sculptor, and dates toward the end of the revolution. The tomb was built by Lenoin with fragments of a chapel of the convent of the Paraclete at Nogent-sur-Marne, of which Heloise was the abbess. Lenoin managed to bring some glass from the windows of the old chapel, and two medallions which adorn the tomb the sculptor purchased from a religious house in Paris. This is all that is genuine about the tomb.—London Globe.

That Headache!

"This is such a beautiful treat," said the impecunious man at the matinee where they went on her pass, "that I want to take you to dinner afterward if my headache gets better."

"Is your headache getting better?" she asked him after the second act.

"It's terrible," said he. "I can hardly see."

After the third act she again approached the subject. "How does your headache seem to be getting?" she queried solicitously.

"Worse and worse," he frowned.

When the performance was over he held his head with both hands. "My head aches so," he moaned, "I'm afraid I'll die of it."

"I knew it," said she as they walked on home.—New York Press.

Queer Goldfish.

Beautiful and most interesting of all goldfish is a native of Japan, and it is noted for the beauty of its tail and the abnormal length of its fins. The tail resembles a delicate veil, and the fins are developed to such an extent that it is impossible for the fish to make rapid progress in the water. It is therefore solely on account of its beauty that it is prized and because in this respect it differs widely from other varieties of goldfish, such as the "telescope fish," the eyes of which bulge out of the head in most unsightly fashion; the "celestial eyed fish," which is also uncomely because its eyes are bullet shaped and are ever turned skyward, and the "egg fish," which is so called because its body is somewhat amorphous, but resembles an egg more than anything else.

His Impartiality.

Lord Lansdowne once congratulated Lord Crewe on an eloquent speech in the house of lords. "I have followed it," he said, "with earnest attention, not only on account of the importance of the subject, but also on account of the noble lord's judicial attitude. I admired his earnestness and his eloquence, but what impressed me most was his impartiality." A pause. "Yes, until the last minute I did not know on which side of the fence his lordship was coming down."

Knew the Wrong Man.

It was with a good deal of confidence that he walked up to the magistrate's desk in a Philadelphia station notwithstanding the fact that a policeman had a firm hold on both sleeves. He waited quietly till one of the policemen made the accusation of "drunk and disorderly" and then asked the magistrate if he might speak.

"Yes," replied the magistrate. "What have you to say?"

"Well, judge, I was drunk last night, but it does not often happen. I have lived in this ward nearly all my life, and any one can tell you that."

"Oh, lived here all your life, have you? Do you know any one in the ward that can speak for you?" asked the magistrate.

"Yes," said the prisoner, "I know ——. He can tell you all about me."

"You know him, do you? Well, so do I. Ten days," was the result.

KICKED BY HORSE

Lock Haven Boy's Skull Crushed But May Recover.

Albert Wadsworth, a 16 years old son of Alexander Wadsworth, residing near Lock Haven, had his skull crushed by a vicious horse one day last week. Although painfully injured, the boy did not lose consciousness and the attending physicians are hopeful of his recovery.

The young man had gone into the stable and while engaged near the stall of the horse in question, the animal kicked over the side and caught him squarely on the forehead. Wadsworth was knocked a distance of about five feet by the force of the blow. He was quickly removed to his home and the pressure on his brain relieved.

Capt. Bogardus Again Hits the Bull's Eye.

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says:—I have suffered a long time with kindey and bladder trouble and have used several well known kidney medicines all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I use Foley's Kidney Pill I was subjected to severe backache and pains in my kidneys with suppression and oftentimes a cloudy voiding. While upon arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and once more feel like my own self. All this owe solely to Foley's Kidney Pills and I always recommend them to my fellow sufferers." Sold by C. M. FOLEY'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR BACKACHE KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

A Far Look.

Three visitors traveling in the Isle of Man thought they would visit Snaefell, the king of Manx mountains. When walking up toward the mountain they espied an old shepherd coming toward them. They thought they would take a rise out of him, so one accosted him, saying:

"They tell me, old man, you can see England, Scotland, Ireland and even as far as America from the top of this mountain."

"Oh, yes!" said the old man. "If you will come with me I will show you much farther than America."

So, chuckling to themselves, they decided to follow him. After trudging for about half an hour up the mountain side in a boiling sun they began to feel rather fagged and kept asking the shepherd how much farther they had to go.

He kept urging them on a little farther until at last the three visitors lay down on the grass and said they would go no farther for any sight.

"Now," said the old man, "if you will sit here long enough you will see the moon."

Buried on His Horse.

Lord Dacre, who died fighting for the Lancastrians at Towton, England, in 1461, directed that if he were killed in the battle his favorite war horse should be buried in the same grave with him. According to his wishes, when his interment took place in Saxon churchyard after the battle a tremendous grave was dug, and in it the warrior was buried, seated upright on his horse. For centuries reflections were cast upon the accuracy of this tradition, but some years ago while excavations were being made close by the reputed burial place of Lord Dacre the pick of a digger struck into a great bone, and upon further search being made the skull of a big horse was brought to the surface. As this was found almost at the very spot under which the body of Lord Dacre was said to lie it was accepted as confirmation of the tradition, particularly as the skull was found to be standing vertically in the soil. The skull was replaced carefully in its original position and the excavation filled up.

Queer Creatures.

There are microscopic creatures which live in roof gutters and on the bark of trees and are known as water bears and wheel animalculae. If allowed to dry up under the microscope they can be seen to shrivel into shapeless masses, which may be kept for years uninjured in the dried state. On being placed, after this long interval, in water they gradually plump up, resume their proper shape and move about in search of food just as if nothing had happened. Much the same is true for the minute worms which, from the substances in which they live, are known as paste and vinegar eels. Well known is the famous case of the desert snail which, retracted into its shell, was fastened to a tablet in the British museum and showed no sign of life for seven years, when one morning it was found crawling hungrily about the glass case that formed its prison.—Westminster Gazette.

Saluting With the Hat.

Before the invention of wigs the hat was rarely removed except to salute others, especially royal personages. It was worn at table when ladies or persons of rank were present. Except when saluting royalty it was the custom merely to raise the hand to the hat somewhat after the manner of a military salute. When it became the mode to wear a profusion of false hair the hat was less needed as a protection for the head and was carried under the arm.

A Retiary.

A retiary was the name of a Roman gladiator armed in a peculiar way. He was furnished with a trident and net, with no more covering than a short tunic, and with these implements he endeavored to entangle and dispatch his adversary, who was called a secutor (from sequi, to follow) and was armed with a helmet, a shield and a sword. The name of the first is pronounced as if spelled re-shi-a-ry, the accent on the first syllable.

Improving on Euclid.

The Pioneer of Allahabad tells stories of some "kindergarten" classes in the English army. Among the definitions given in an examination is one of a circle peculiarly happy, which gives a freshness to Euclid. It is, "A straight line which starts at a certain point and gets back to the same point as quickly as possible."

A Chaste Compliment.

The late Chief Justice Chase was noted for his gallantry. While on a visit to the south shortly after the war he was introduced to a very beautiful woman who prided herself upon her devotion to the "lost cause." Anxious that the chief justice should know her sentiments, she remarked as she gave him her hand, "Mr. Chase, you see before you a rebel who has not been reconstructed."

"Madam," he replied with a profound bow, "reconstruction in your case would be blasphemous."—Everybody's Magazine.

Commonwealth vs. Harry Toner, prosecutor Frank P. Bartley. This case is from Bellefonte and the defendant is charged with larceny, the facts being published in this paper at the time of the arrest. Defendant waived the finding of the grand jury and plead guilty.

At this point no other criminal cases were ready and the civil case was taken up, J. A. B. Miller vs. M. Kocher, being an appeal from a Justice. Verdict Tuesday morning in favor of the plaintiff for $27.00.

Commonwealth vs. Joseph Spear, indicted, first count, desertion of wife; second count, desertion of child; prosecutrix, Stella Spear; defendant plead guilty.

Commonwealth vs. Margaret Bechdel; indicted for assault; prosecutrix Annie Davy. This case is from Liberty Township, and grows out of an altercation between the prosecutrix and the defendant on June 8, 1909. The Commonwealth alleged that the defendant went to the premises of the prosecutrix on said day and using vile and profane language, and assaulted the prosecutrix. The defendant alleged that she had gone to the home of the prosecutrix, looking for some turkeys, and that she had been assaulted by the prosecutrix and abused by vile and profane language. Verdict of not guilt, the prosecutrix to pay one-third of the costs, and the defendant two-thirds of the costs.

Commonwealth vs. Oscar Ostrander, indicted, first count, selling liquor without a license; second count, furnishing liquor to a minor, on January 15, 1920 to one Samuel Irvin. The case is from Bellefonte. Defendant waived the finding of the grand jury and plead guilty.

Commonwealth vs. Henry Gordon; indicted, first count, entering an office building with intent to commit a felony: second count, larceny; third count receiving stolen goods. This case is from Bellefonte. The defendant waived the finding of the grand jury and plead guilty.

Commonwealth vs. George F. Gray and Irvin G. Gray, indicted for aggravated assault and battery. This case is from Julian, and grows out of an altercation at or near the Penna. R. R. Station, July 31, 1909, when an assault and battery was committed by George F. Gray upon the prosecutor, Elmer Meyers, which the prosecutor admitted, but denied that the grade of the assault was that of an aggravated assault and battery. Irvin G. Gray was included in the indictment as an accessory before the fact and as having abetted the fight. The defendants denied that the senior Mr. Gray had encouraged the fight or that he was an accessory thereto. Verdict of guilty against both defendants.

Commonwealth vs. Elmer Meyers; prosecutor George F. Gray; indicted, first count assault and battery; second count, aggravated assault and battery. This case was also from Julian and grows out of an altercation between the prosecutor and the defendant at said place on March 8, 1909, and growing out of some misunderstanding between the parties of a few days previous. The defendant admits the crime of assault and battery, but that it was in self-defense. This fight is also one of the incidents that brought about the case of Commonwealth against the Grays. Verdict on Wednesday afternoon, of guilty.

Commonwealth va. Harvey Green, indicted for betrayal, prosecutrix Edna May Gramley. The defendant plead guilty and the usual sentence was imposed.

Commonwealth vs. H. C. Hall prosecutor Thomas Mostyn, indicted, first count assault and battery, second count aggrevated assault and battery. This action grows out of an altercation between the prosecutor and the defendant at the Tower at the Osceola Railroad yard in Rush Township, on the evening of September 14, 1909. Both parties are employes of the R. R. Co. The defendant is a yardclerk, and the presecutor a brakeman, and on the evening of said date the prosecutor took some exceptions to the run he was assigned to by the defendant, who for the time being was acting as yardmaster. Some trouble arose between them and the defendant was assaulted by the prosecutor, after which the defendant struck the prosecutor over the head with an iron poker. Verdict of not guilty, defendant to pay two-thirds of the costs, and the prosecutor, one-third.

George F. Gray, Irvin G. Gray and Elmer Meyers were than called to the bar and each sentenced to pay a fine of $20.00 and the costs of prosecution.

Commonwealth vs. Darb Swisher, prosecutor J. W. Bruss; indicted first count, assault with attempt to maim, disfigure and disable; second count, wantonly pointing and discharging a fire arm. This case was from Huston township, and arises out of some trouble between the parties as to some property, and some shooting by the defendant. Verdict on Thursday.

Prof. D. M. Wolf Dies.

instance comes to mind of his close study of his pupils and his thorough understanding of each one entrusted to his care. It was while he was teaching at Bellefonte. One of his pupils had become unruly. Professor Wolf had sent him from the classroom with the ultimatum that he might return when he was ready to apologize for his conduct. The boy, headstrong and impetuous, was defiant and refused to apologize. For several days this continued. Finally, Professor Wolf walked up to the boy's desk, and in a voice that was gentle and kindly, he said:

"I have come to you to apologize because I have made up my mind that I must have been in the wrong. I know that you would not have refused to apologize had you not been convinced you were in the right. I am very sorry to have been so unjust to you."

The boy was in the wrong. Tears filled his eyes as he stood up and said so and apologized. And there were tears in the eyes of the man who had found and won the boys' heart and thereby sealed a friendship that was never dimmed by passing years and which guides this pen in paying loving tribute to one of God's noblemen--Daniel M. Wolf.

L. Hastings Gates.

The sad news was received in Bellefonte on Monday of the death on the morning of that day of L. Hastings Gates, at Mt. Alto, to which place he had been removed several weeks ago in the hope that it would aid him in being restored to health. It seemed, however, that the ravages of the disease from which he suffered had gained such headway that his system would not respond and on Sunday night word was received here that he was extremely weak. On the following day another message conveyed the tidings of his death. Hastings Gates was about 20 years of age and was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Gates, of this place. He was an exceptionally bright and industrious young man and was popular with many friends among whom the news of his death has cast the deepest gloom. His illness dates back about one year, when he attended the National Guard encampment, at Somerset, as a member of the Fifth Regiment bugle corps. When he returned home he was in a weakened condition which was further aggravated by an attack of typhoid fever. This served to undermine his system and tuberculosis developed. It was finally decided to remove him to Mt. Alto, but this could not be done for a time owing to his weakness. Once he arrived there it was realized that the chances of recovery were anything but encouraging. With considerable fortitude he fought against the disease, but finally his eyes closed in restful slumber and his sufferings were at an end. It is a rather strange coincidence that this marks the second death among young men recently employed by the Adams Express Company, at Bellefonte. Joseph Barnes, it will be recalled, drove the Adams Express wagon until his health failed and he went to Mt. Alto, where he died. Hastings Gates succeeded him at the Adams Express office and, as it so happened, he too was compelled to relinquish his position and go to Mt. Alto, where he died and from which place the remains were brought to Bellefonte for interment.

Mrs. David F. Fortney.

Mrs. David F. Fortney, whose critical illness was noted in "The Republican" last week, died on Thursday afternoon, last, at her late home, on Bishop Street. While it was known to all that she was dangerously ill, so many persons confidently believed that she would be restored to health that the news of her death came as a distinct shock to the community. Funeral services were held on Monday morning, conducted by Rev. Dr. J. Allison Platts. Mrs. Fortney was a splendid woman, a loyal wife and a kind and loving mother. Before her marriage she was Miss Sarah Huey, a daughter of Robert and Katie Glenn Huey, and was born in 1843, near Pine Grove Mills. When she was quite small her father removed to a farm near Rebersburg and later to the Dr. Henderson farm, on the Branch, where Sarah lived until she became a young woman in her teens, at which period in her life she identified herself with the Presbyterian church, then under the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Robert Hammill. For a time she taught school in that part of the county, later teaching the primary school at Boalsburg. In 1872 she removed to Bellefonte, where for a time she conducted a millinery store. Relinquishing this business she resumed her teaching, having charge at different times of schools at Unionville, Snow Shoe and other places. On September 19, 1876, she was married to David F. Fortney, then a rising young lawyer, and from that time to the date of her death she resided at Bellefonte. Surviving are a husband and one son, D. Paul Fortney; also one sister, Mrs. Nancy J. Strickland, of Bellefonte, and one brother, William C. Huey, of North Warren, Pa. A daughter died about 23 years ago.

Ulp, of Williamsport, and two half-brothers, Alpine and Claude C. White, of Lock Haven. The County at a Glance.

Howard.

Last Wednesday evening the electric lights went out suddenly and failed to come on again. Upon investigation it was learned that the bank of the race had been washed out, thus cutting off the supply of water that runs the large water wheel which furnished power for the dynamo. The steam power at the mill was not in shape for starting up that evening and the break was not repaired until eight o'clock the next evening. This was the first time the current had been off since Mr. Long installed the plant.

It is quite probable that a change will be made in the Howard charge of the Methodist Episcopal church at the next conference which meets this month. Beech Creek and Hunter Run will likely be taken off this charge and with Laurel Run will constitute a new charge. The Howard charge would then be composed of the appointments of Howard, Kennedy and Curtin.

For the first time for several years the young men enjoyed coasting down the hlll on the Woodward farm, now owned by John Robb. The long slope of the ridge was covered with a heavy crust of snow and ice and the sleds and their riders would come gliding down the steep decline with a speed that almost took their breath away. The coasters would ride all the way from the top of the ridge to the creek, a distance of more than half a mile.

The special instruction train from the Pennsylvania Agriculture school attracted a large number of the farmers of this vicinity to the station last Thursday to hear the lectures by the well known instructors from State College. The two specially fitted lecture cars were filled and an overflow meeting was held in the waiting room of the station. By special invitation the graduating class of the High school attended the lectures. All who heard them were well pleased and hope that another such opportunity will be afforded them soon.

A number of the students of the High school have taken up the study of agriculture along with their other studies. Whether or not any good can be accomplished in a high school is open to question to many. It is argued that none who are raised in town are likely to take to farming and the boys who are raised on the farm will have more real practical knowledge than can be gained at school. The study of agriculture in the schools may be an inducement to some to take up agriculture as their life work once they are interested in the same. The town boys have always been taught to look upon the farmer as a "Rube" and the study of agriculture in the schools will have a tendency to dispel this idea, and give him his rightful place in society.

Miss Julia Bidwell has returned to Pittsburg after a delightful visit at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Bidwell.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hoffman, of Williamsport, are guests at the home of Mrs. Hoffman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Spigelmyer.

G. D. Wilson, representing the firm of Meredith & Co., of Philadelphia and Camden, has been transacting business in Bellefonte this week.

Mrs. Philip D. Foster and little daughter, of State College, have been visiting this week at the home of her mother, Mrs. Catherine Haupt.

Judge James A. Beaver is in Williamsport this week, where the Superior Court is in session. A number of important Centre County cases are scheduled for decision.

While trying to get over the smooth ice on Bishop Street on Friday, last, Clair Grove, the young son of Albert Grove, fell and sustained a compound fracture of his leg.

C. W. Hartman, assessor of Millheim borough, and R. H. Meek, assessor of Snow Shoe township, transacted business in Bellefonte during the week. Both are genial men and of course their friends were glad to see them.

Announcement has been made of the approaching wedding of Miss Bessie Brown, of Bellefonte, and Robert Ray, at one time a State College student. After their marriage the young couple will make their home at Harrisburg.

The Linn Street friends of Miss Mary Cook on Tuesday evening tendered her a surprise party in her apartments at the Brockerhoff House. Elaborate refreshments were served and all present had a most delightful time.

Mrs. H. R. Curtin and son, Laird, will go to Atlantic City today for a visit of several weeks. Laird has been recovering nicely from the effects of his recent illness and it is believed that a few weeks at Atlantic City will put on the finishing touches and prepare him to resume business as general manager of the Curtin Forge Company.

Dr. Dobbins falls heir to the estate of the late Mrs. Jane Welsh, according to the will left by the latter. Dr. Dobbins may conclude to live at the Bush House, but for the next month he will continue to make his home at the Welsh residence, where he has lived for quite a while. Miss Anna Blanchard will keep house for him until his plans are more definitely settled.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hinman Gibson have decided to locate at Plainfield, N. J. and they will move to that place from Lansdowne next week. Mr. Gibson will have his headquarters at New York. Mrs. Gidson had about decided to come to Bellefonte and visit her parents Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cook, but at a few weeks the last minute Mr. Gibson found a house that suited them so they will go there direct from Lansdowne.

Mrs. Hugh N. Crider became suddenly ill on Monday and when Dr. M. J. Locke was called in he pronounced her trouble as due to appendicitis. Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Freeman, of Tyrone Mrs. Crider's parents, were telephoned for and they arrived in town on the noon train. After a consultation it was decided to have an operation. Mrs. Crider was at once removed to the Bellefonte hospital, where a successful operation was performed on Monday evening. Her condition is entirely satisfactory.

On Thursday night, last, the annual banquet of the Holmes' was held on their farm, back of State College, and a most enjoyable time was had by those in attendance. During the evening a splendid supper was served, the menu including oysters, sauer kraut and baked beans. A mock trial was but one of many interesting features that made the evening pass only too quickly. Laird Holmes was "convicted" of stealing a tent. Merchant Grimm was the defendant's lawyer. Mr. Grim is a first-class tailor, but judging by the way in which he handled matters he was not regarded as a success with that kind of a suit. Two of the visitors in attendance were A. O. Tyson and Mac. Rossman, of Oak Grove.

C. A. Bessey, representing the American University Society, of New York, has been in Bellefonte for several days, adjusting the troubles growing out of the recent visit of a woman agent, who led thirty or more persons to subscribe for certain books under the impression that they would also have the benefit of a series of correspondence lectures. As things turned out, the lectures were a myth and the subscribers found themselves under contract to pay $29.50 for ten books. Lawyer James C. Furst represented some of the subscribers, who adjusted the matter with Mr. Bessey on a basis of $20 instead of $29 50.

"A Jolly American Tramp."

Don't sit around and mope and say there's no fun in anything—go to Garman's Opera House next Monday evening, March 7, and laugh at "A Jolly American Tramp," the funniest hobo that ever blew into town.

There's a play that will make you forget your mother-in-law and make pay day seem a week nearer.

"A Jolly American Tramp" is not only a screamingly funny play with music, dances and songs, but it also has a beautiful story with a tear that glistens while you laugh again. It is a play for the big and little ones. Popular prices.

A WOUNDED BUCK

Col. Parker, of Clarion County, Recalls Lively Experience.

"I have had a good many novel and exciting adventures in the woods," said Col. Parker of Clarion county, while at Harrisburg one day last week, "but the one I had with a broken-legged buck once was the liveliest of all. I was on my way home from town in a low bodied, old-fashioned sleigh, and when within half a mile of my house I saw standing at the side of the road and not more than 10 feet from it, in an open space in the woods, one of the biggest buck deer I had ever seen. My horse shied to one side when he saw the buck and ran quite a way past him before I could hold him up and stop him.

"When I got the horse stopped I looked back. The buck was standing where I had just seen him. I noticed then that he was very thin and sick looking. He was a fine young buck, and if in flesh would have been as fine a specimen of his kind as ever led a chase. I resolved to act the good Samaritan and see if I couldn't drive the buck along with me so it could herd with my cattle in the barnyard, have shelter and food, and possibly regain its health. With this benevolent purpose in mind I tied my horse to a tree at the roadside and walked back to make the effort toward inducing the buck to go along and be cared for.

"As I neared the buck he began to show the first sign that he knew of my presence thereabout, and when I was within two or three paces of where he stood his recognition of the fact that I was there became so positive that I at once saw that he didn't intend to accept my services. The hair on the buck's back had bristled up as I approached him, his ears were laid back flat along his head and his eyes glared fiercely. From a gaunt, half famished looking animal, apparently indifferent to his surroundings or his fate, he had suddenly become fierce and defiant. I took a step backward as the preliminary tactics to a retreat and the buck immediately sprang toward me.

"On the opposite side of the narrow road was a stump six or seven feet high. I cleared the road at one jump and dodged behind that stump, Peering around it I saw the buck coming, and saw also that his right hind leg was broken and was dragging helplessly. Then the buck's dogged fierceness was explained. There is no fiercer animal than a wounded buck. I knew that I was in for an undoubtedly lively time for I couldn't depend on that broken hind leg to be very much of a handicap. If it had been a broken foreleg the case would have been different. A deer with a foreleg disabled is as good as down and out. A disabled hind leg will hinder it scarcely at all in handling itself.

"Well, this wounded buck started right in to give me a lively chase 'round and 'round that stump. For five minutes we circled around the stump, the buck's activity and vitality belying his appearance. I had no weapon, not even a pocket knife, but there was an ax in my sleigh. How to get at the ax, though, was the puzzle. The sleigh was 50 yards away, but between it and the stump were several trees at irregular distances, but no two of them closer than 10 feet. They were all small trees too, the timber having been pretty well thinned out.

"It was plain to me that I couldn't put in a great deal more time speeding around that stump. My only chance was to make a break from the stump to the nearest tree and so on from tree to tree until I could get to the sleigh and secure my ax. With that I had no doubt that I could end the battle quickly.

"I made the break, but when I got to and jumped behind the first tree on my course, which was not more than 15 feet away, the buck's antler grazed my back. I had expected tight work, but that it would be so close was more than I had calculated on. But I succeeded in dashing from one tree to another until I had only to get to the tree to which my horse was tied, and that was only the width of the roadway, my sleigh being on the side of road I had first seen the buck on.

"I had felt that my uncomfortable and perilous experience would soon be at end, but I hadn't taken the feelings and disposition of my horse into account. I made the dash across the road and reached the tree all right, but as the furious buck sprang into the road the horse gave a jump, the halter strap snapped and away went horse, sleigh, ax and all.

"I had no time to think of that, though, for I was now in full sight of the buck and he was coming like a locomotive. I turned to jump behind the tree, but I didn't get there. The buck struck me just behind my hind suspender buttons and lifted me so I cleared a snowdrift that extended along that side of the road. I landed on top of the snowbank. The crust was stiff enough to hold me and I went sliding on over it, striking the ground 10 feet on the other side of it. The blow and the landing knocked the breath out of me and the fall hurt me considerably, but the incident doubtless saved my life.

"The buck in his eagerness to get at me where I lay mounted the snowbank. The crust broke beneath his sharp hoofs and all three of his sound legs instantly became as useless to him as was his belly, and although he showed his fury by threshing his great antlers on the snow and by loud fierce snorts of anger he was helpless. I got up and limped home as fast as I could. I met my son on the way, the horse reaching home without me having naturally alarmed my family. He went back with me and got his gun and went to the spot where I had so luckily escaped from the buck and put the poor creature out of its misery."

Womanly Wisdom.

If you would be farsighted you must learn to live on the heights.

Happiness consists often in just forgetting.

Quit worrying over things you cannot help.

Any old magazines lying around out of use? Lend them to a neighbor who has none.

Fried ham is improved in flavor by sprinkling it slightly with sugar on both sides before frying.

Have a pair of canvas gloves near the wood-box, with which to handle the wood, take out the ash pan, etc.

Woman, what, downhearted? Then go outdoors and stay a few hours a day. Nature is a wonderful healer of weary nerves.

A glazier's knife will be found an excellent thing in the kitchen with which to scrape and clean the bottom of pans and kettles.

She didn't think how it would sound: A widow erected a monument to her husband, with the inscription, "Rest in peace until we meet again."

When baking cookies, or any small cakes, invert the pan and place them on the bottom. They are not so easily scorched and are more readily removed.

"I s'pose you might say, lookin' at it one way, that liquor's great stuff to sort of even up things. Of course it takes shingles off a man's barn, but then it puts patches on his pants."

When pressing men's trousers, in order to take the bagginess out of the knees, press them first perfectly flat with the seams on the edges; then put the seams together and iron the crease down the front.

Ask the good man of the house to look at the supports of your swinging shelves in the cellar, before they come down under the load of canned things. Such a smash would be grievous, indeed. Don't risk it.

Many stores, even in rather small towns, have a "rest room" for those who come to trade. Perhaps you have not discovered this. Ask, next time you are in town, and see how it is. And if enough people ask and ask earnestly enough, the stores which now do not have such places will soon get them.

Never buy spectacles of men who come along offering you great bargains. The chances are that you will not get a fit and you will pay more than the glasses are worth. The eyes are too precious to be tampered with in any such way. Go to some reliable man and have your eyes really fitted. That's the way to do it.

May I presume to give a hint as to how to boil an egg? I know it seems out of place for a mere man to offer such advice, but really to cook an egg, have some boiling water in a saucepan, put in the egg, cover it, and let it stand on the stove for five minutes. Then if you examine it you will find the white creamy, but not hard, and the yoke as well cooked as the white Most things cook better slowly than fast, and it is a great mistake to think that an enormous fire and very fast boiling water are necessary to cook a dinner.

To keep sausage and sparerib fresh till summer: Fry and pack in jars, then pour over all melted lard. Be sure to use pure lard and not the grease in which the sausage or meat has been fried, for such grease will contain some water which will cause the meat to become strong as soon as warm weather comes. The lard used will be good for cooking purposes, for being poured over after the sausage is fried it will have none or very little of the flavor from it. After trying several ways this has proved the only satisfactory one of keeping either sausage or sparerib through the warm weather of summer. From March Farm Journal.

The Poultry Yard.

Do you keep your chickens, or do they keep you?

Good warm wheat makes a nice breakfast for the biddies.

Skim-milk is thin looking stuff, but it may be put to good use in the poultry yard.

A little more clean litter on the floors. Keep the fowls hard at work. It is the price of health.

In poultry raising the breed is important, but the man or woman behind the breed is more so.

Chickens that lay around almost anywhere sometimes are merely emulating their betters.

The man who keeps hens is not so much of a philosopher as the man who has the hens keep him.

For hatching purposes take the eggs from the hens that lay best. Build up; never let the standard down.

A shelf, a couple of feet below the roosts, is handy to catch the droppings, and handy to clean. And don't forget to clean it.

Excelsior always seemed to me rather cold stuff to make nests of. Good fine, clean oat straw is about the best of anything that we ever tried.

As a rule, eggs from two-year-old hens give better satisfaction at this time of the year than when from younger stock, and the chicks are more vigorous.

The eggs of hens that did heavy laying during the winter are not so apt to be as strongly fertilized, as eggs from hens that made but a fair showing.

The first egg laid before a hen goes to sitting will often be so small that it will have no yolk at all. There is an old notion that it is bad luck to bring these small eggs in the house.

A nest that suits the turkey hen first-rate may be made by turning a salt barrel on the side. Put straw in the hollow, and a nest egg, and cover the barrel over with brush, if you have it handy.

One of my neighbors says that there's no money in poultry, and that the easiest way to get eggs is to buy them. He says that he keeps chickens to eat the bugs in his orchard; pays 'em a cent a bug.

Is there a place under some old building where you can spade up the earth and give it to the hens to work at? They will dig away hard to find the worms that may be in it. It will do them more good.

When a hen lays now and then, and not soon again, and you can't decide whether she hadn't better quit altogether, I'll tell you what to do: Why, just ax her to, and neither in box nor in keg will she ever lay another egg.

Especially in early hatches, care should be taken not to set a hen until she is thoroughly broody. It does not take much experience to know when a hen is really broody. She will be very fussy when approached, and hug close to the nest when the hand is placed under her.

March settings should not contain more than eleven eggs, for when a larger number is given the hen can not sufficiently cover them to impart the necessary warmth. When too many eggs are placed in the nest, those on the outer edge are not apt to get the amount of heat required to develop the germ and bring forth the chick.

Any system of feeding is expensive if the hens do not lay, and the greater the number of non-producers the greater the cost of every egg produced. Improper feeding or overfeeding may be the cause of a flock yielding only half of what it should. It will be found that the surest course of feeding is to follow as nearly as possible along the line of nature, and this means variety in such a way as to compel exercise.

REAPING BENEFIT

From the Experience of Bellefonte People.

We are fortunate indeed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utterance of Bellefonte residents on the following subject will interest and benefit thousands of our readers. Read this statement. No better proof can be had.

Mrs. L. Ingram, 382 E. Bishop Street, Bellefonte, Pa., says: "Doan's Kindey Pills have done me a world of good and I feel that I cannot speak too highly of them. I suffered intensely from backache and my kidneys gave me a great deal of annoyance. Nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Green's Pharmacy Co. In return for the improvement they made I publicly recommended them in October 1907 and at this time I can say that I have had no futher trouble from my kidneys. You are at liberty to use my name as one who recommends Doan's Kidney Pills highly from personal experience."

Vitriol in Pork Barrel.

In taking his pork from the pickling barrel preparatory to placing it in the smoke house for further curing, Harvey Keiffner, the ice dealer, of Flemington, discovered that the brine and pork was strongly impregnated with blue vitriol, a poison, making the meat unfit for use. How the vitriol got in the barrel is a mystery to Mr. Keiffner, he having purchased the barrel at a farm sale back of Dunstown last summer. As he used the same barrel to scald the hogs in when he butchered last fall, and failed to detect any sign of vitriol, it would appear that the vitriol had been placed in the brine after the pork had been packed in the barrel. As he has no enemies that he is aware of, and knowing of no one who would stoop to such a despicable act, he is puzzled to know how the blue vitriol got in the barrel. The spoiled pork represents the hams, shoulders and side meat from two large hogs, and the loss to Mr. Keiffner will be about fifty dollars.—Lock Haven Democrat.

When Children Smoked.

Jorevin de Rochefort, who published in Paris in 1671 an account of his travels in England, tells the following:

"While we were walking about the town (Worcester) he asked me if it was the custom in France as in England that when the children went to school they carried in their satchel with their books a pipe of tobacco, which their mothers took care to fill early in the morning, it serving them instead of breakfast, and that at the accustomed hour every one laid aside his book to light his pipe, the master smoking with them and teaching them how to hold their pipes and draw in the tobacco."

In England at the time of the great plague it was reported that no one living in a tobacconist's house fell sick of the disease. This caused a great demand for tobacco. Hearne says in his diary, "I remember that I heard formerly Tom Rogers, who was yeoman beadle, say that when he was a schoolboy at Eton that year when the plague raged all the boys of that school were obliged to smoke every morning and that he was never whipped so much in his life as he was one morning for not smoking."

In the Nick of Time.

The steamer was on the point of leaving, and the passengers lounged on the deck and waited for the start. At length one of them espied a cab in the far distance, and it soon became evident that the driver was doing his level best to catch the boat.

Already the sailors' hands were on the gangways, and the cab's chances looked small indeed. Then a sportive passenger wagered a sovereign to a shilling that he would miss it. The offer was taken, and at once the deck became a scene of wild excitement.

"He'll miss it!"

"No; he'll just do it!"

"Come on!"

"He won't do it!"

"Yes, he will. He's done it! Hurrah!"

In the very nick of time the cab arrived, its occupant sprang out and ran up the one gangway left.

"Cast off!" he cried.

It was the captain.—Pearson's Weekly.

An East Indian Verdict.

In a case in one of our Indian courts a jury had before it evidence that could not be in any way shaken. When the concluding stage had been reached the following interchange of conversation took place between the judge and his colleagues in the administration of justice:

"Gentlemen, are you ready to give your verdict?"

"Yes."

"What is your verdict?"

"Our answer is, sir, that you can do as you like with the men that have confessed, but we acquit all the rest."

"But is it possible that you have weighed the evidence?"

"Evidence like this can always be fabricated."

"Do you find that as regards these prisoners it has been fabricated?"

"Evidence can be fabricated."

"So the evidence is untrustworthy?"

"Unless a man confesses who can tell he is guilty?"—Bombay Gazette.

The Fun of the Farce.

It is related that the manager of a theater consented to hear in his room a young man who had an unfortunate impediment in his speech read a short farce, the sole condition being that it should not occupy more time than it took to finish the cigar the manager had just lit. They both started, the one reading, the other smoking, but as the mild Havana gradually grew shorter the worse the young author spluttered. They finished together. Of course the question was immediately put, "What do you think of it?"

"Well," replied the manager, "it's not a half bad idea. Father, mother, lover, daughter, all stuttering, will be novel!"

The author, furious, exclaimed: "They don't stammer! It is only my misfortune."

"Oh, then, the play isn't funny at all! Sorry that I can't accept it," returned the manager.

The tall man came into her little blue kitchen and looked over the shelves which were just beneath the level of his head, but above hers. He ran his finger over one shelf, then showed it to her. It was pretty black.

"You are a nice housekeeper," he said.

"This kitchen wasn't made for tall people," she explained falteringly. "It was made for little ones."—New York Press.

Crude Logic.

It is told of an East Indian law student that he once threw his examiners into confusion by declaring matrimony to be an illegal state. "How so? How so?" he was asked by the perturbed examiners, many of them married men. The student smiled beatifically. "Marriage," quoth he, "is a lottery, and lotteries are forbidden by law."

A Frequent Insincerity.

"The man's own words prove him a prevaricator," said Mr. Quibbles.

"In what way?"

"He writes me an insulting letter and signs it 'Yours respectfully.'"—Washington Star.

LUCKY IMITATION.

An Experience With the Russian Autocrat Marshal Gourko.

Marshal Gourko, the famous Russian general, was a terrible autocrat. On one occasion an impersonator of celebrated men was performing at a theater in Odessa. One evening he received a mysterious message, which read, "Study General Gourko." In Russia it is better not to inquire into matters that one does not understand, and so the artist spent an hour in privately impersonating the autocratic Russian.

Just as the evening performance was about to commence an order of arrest signed by Gourko was presented to the impersonator, and without explanation he was led through the streets to the marshal's palace and into an apartment where the terrible man was seated. "They tell me that you impersonate celebrated men," he roared. "Impersonate me!"

Giving a hasty look at Gourko, the performer turned to the mirror to "make up." It was an anxious time, for if the marshal should take exception to the representation he had unlimited power to inflict punishment. The impersonator dragged himself together and turned to the marshal a copy of his own face and overbearing manner. Gourko burst into a roar of laughter, and the dangerous moment was over.

EELS IN JAPAN.

The Restaurant Cook Catches Alive the Fish the Patron Selects.

Entering a Japanese restaurant, a guest who wishes broiled eels and rice is led to a tank of squirming fresh water eels and bidden to point out the object of his preference, says a writer in the Delineator. The cook, who stands by, selects the wriggling victim of his choice, strikes its head smartly upon a wooden block and, squatting by it, grasps the creature's neck, inserts a knife in the left side of the vertebrae and dexterously runs it down to the tail, then, rapidly applying his instrument to the other side of the backbone, repeats the process, leaving the eel split open.

Then, chopping the flattened eel into three inch lengths, the pieces are plunged into boiling water to make the skin tender, long bamboo splints used as skewers are thrust through them, and they are then placed on rods over glowing charcoal and broiled brown, being plunged from time to time into a vessel that contains old soy of the color and consistency of molasses. These preparations concluded, the steaming eels again are drained and placed in red lacquer boxes with rice and set before the customer.

The Phonograph.

One need not be afraid of operating a machine too constantly, as there is little danger of wearing it out, and the motor will give better service when used frequently than when allowed to stand unused. In all cases avoid winding the spring too tightly. Stop when it offers strong resistance. In many cases it is specifically stated that the needles should not be used more than once, and these directions should be observed. Not to follow them means almost certain damage to the records. The machine should be kept well oiled; otherwise its motion will become sluggish. Sewing machine oil may be used for that purpose. The records should be kept free from dust, as dirt clogs the sound wave grooves and tends to give a scratchy sound to the reproduction. A good record cleaner may be made by gluing a small piece of velvet carpet to a wooden block. Such a cleaner always should be used on dusty records before they are placed on the machine. —Suburban Life

A Dismal World.

"Why are you sad, my dear? You ought to be supremely happy. Here, I've just inherited a fortune, and everything looks rosy. I can't understand why at such a time as this you should look so dismal. What is it? Have you heard bad news from home?"

"No, no; it isn't that. I'll try to throw it off. I suppose I'm foolish not to be thoroughly happy. Let us not mention the matter again."

"But I insist on knowing what it is that so depresses you. If it's anything that I can help I shall"—

"Well, if you must know, I've just heard that the Snobleighs next door are going to move away, so she'll not be here to feel jealous of me when we begin to put on style after you get your money."—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Rent Flag.

On Jan. 18 every year, the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, the Duke of Wellington is bound to present to the sovereign a small flag, which is the annual rent in "petit sargenty" by which the estate of Strathfieldsaye is held of the crown. The flag must be a miniature tricolor or eagle of the Napoleonic army, fringed with gold, with a gilded eagle on the head of the staff and the number of the year embroidered at the top corner of the flag near the eagle.

A Quick Witted Doctor.

A French surgeon who was once attending a sultan resorted to an expedient which, although efficacious, might have resulted in his own death.

He had been commissioned to bleed the grand seignior and either through timidity or nervousness had met with an awkward accident. The point of the lancet broke off in the vein, and the blood would not flow. That point must be got out somehow. Without stopping to consider the consequences to himself, the surgeon gave his highness a violent slap in the face. This produced the desired effect, for surprise and indignation on the part of his august patient put the blood into violent circulation. The vein bled freely, and the lancet point came out.

The bystanders were about to lay hands on the surgeon when he said, "First let me finish the operation and bandage the wound." This done, he threw himself at the feet of the sultan and explained his action.

The sultan not only pardoned him, but gave him a handsome reward for keeping his wits about him in a critical moment.

A Knockout.

A young lawyer was engaged in a case when a witness was put in the box to testify to the reputation of the place in question.

This witness in answer to a query as to the reputation of the place replied, "A poor shop."

The lawyer inquired, "You say it has the reputation of being a 'poor shop?'"

"Yes, sir."

"Whom did you hear say it was a 'poor shop?'"

The witness did not recollect any one he had heard say so.

"What!" said the lawyer. "You have sworn this place has the reputation of being a poor shop and yet cannot tell of any one you have ever heard say so?"

The witness was staggered for a moment at the words of the lawyer. The lawyer was feeling triumphant when the witness gathered himself together and quietly remarked, addressing the lawyer:

"Well, you have the reputation of being a poor lawyer, but I have never heard any one say so."

Romance of an Inkstain.

Pens and furniture used in the signing of famous treaties and documents recall Archibald Forbes' experience after Sedan. After witnessing Napoleon's interview with Bismarck at a wayside cottage and his subsequent surrender Forbes and a fellow war correspondent slept at the chateau which the fallen emperor had occupied the night before. The bedroom was just as Napoleon had left it and by the bed the open book with which he had read himself to sleep. It was Lytton's "Last of the Barons." Sitting at the adjoining writing table, Forbes wrote his dispatch, while his companion gnawed at a ham bone, their sole remainder of food. Irate at the little eating it furnished, he flung it across the room and upset the inkstand into which Forbes was dipping. When Forbes revisited the chateau a month or so later the inkstain was pointed out as caused by Napoleon's rage on learning the German terms of peace!—London Chronicle.

The Order Pleased the Cook.

The following story is told on a missionary of the China inland mission, a bachelor keeping house for himself in the southern part of China: One morning in ordering his dinner he wished to tell his cook to buy a chicken. Instead of saying "ye" for chicken he aspirated the word, saying, "Buy me a 'che.'" His cook thought that was an eminently proper command and went about his marketing in high good humor. At noon the missionary found no chicken cooked—in fact, no dinner at all, for his cook had not returned. About dark the man came back, saying: "This was not a good day for buying wives, and I have been all day looking for one, but at last I found one for you. She is rather old and not pretty, but you can have her cheap. I have promised $40 for her."

Browning.

Browning lent Lord Coleridge one of his works to read, and afterward, meeting the poet, the lord chief justice said to him: "What I could understand I heartily admired, and parts ought to be immortal. But as to much of it I really could not tell whether I admired it or not, because for the life of me I could not understand it."

Browning replied, "If a reader of your caliber understands 10 per cent of what I write I think I ought to be content."

Exchange of Courtesies.

One of the keenest of journalists and wits, Moritz Gottlieb Saphir, had the better of the irate stranger against whom he ran by accident at the corner of a street in Munich. "Beast!" cried the offended person without waiting for an apology. "Thank you," said the journalist, "and mine is Saphir."

Autos Have Road Rights.

On Friday Judge Omerod, of Potter county, made a statement from the bench that will be of interest to Grangers and supervisors. In charging the jury in an automobile case he said: "The auto is as much a vehicle of the traveling public and has as much right to the highway in a safe condition for its operation as a farmer with horse and wagon and damages which might be collected from a township by reason of thank-ye-mams would far exceed the cost of hidden culverts. The automobile is here to stay and the sooner we all adjust ourselve to the new conditions and requirements its coming imposes the happier we will be and the less liable to expensive damage suits.

High-Record Prices for Hogs.

The features this week in the prices situation have been the continued advance of hogs to levels touched only once since the Civil war, says Bradstreet's Weekly report. The ten-dollar hog has, in fact, arrived at most markets. The country is claimed to have been swept bare of these animals, farmers even selling their brood sows. Hog products are all higher, and other meats have been advanced at wholesale and retail, confirming earlier views of the ephemeral effect of the widespread agitation a month ago regarding meat prices. Crop-damage talk has advanced wheat prices, July leading with a gain of over 3 cents. Corn is easier on large offerings. Cotton broke heavily in the earlier part of the week, the loss at one time being 70 points on spots and futures, due to reported liquidation of the over-bought long speculative interests in that staple. A slight rally later reduced the net loss to 35 points.
